CHAPTER XI.

Tangled Threads

Relived though Helen was to some extent, by her father's assurances and by the explanation which he had given of the reason of his being in a trap-quilt frame of mind.

She knew that whatever might be the outcome of the graver change which Gordon's return would bring, she would herself be wishing more than ever that her lover had never seen the West. That little it had brought him his change of heart was not worth what it had cost already and would cost in the future. Surely, his manhood was alive enough not to have been dimmed by such an environment, and it had been east in the East, she could have had him always with her. A man after whom she had scarcely yearned.

She gave Helen no chance to avert the visit, for with the obliqueness of the plains, he had brought the visitors upstairs with him, and so blotting what she had written and weighing what she had said, she accepted the breeze which arose to greet them.

"This is good of you, Mrs. Purnell. And I am so glad to meet my daughter. I've been here all day and now you have taken pity on me."

Mrs. Purnell shot an "I told you so" glance at Dorothy, which made that young lady smile, and then she arose to greet them.

"This is good of you, Mrs. Purnell. And I am so glad to meet my daughter. I've been here all day and now you have taken pity on me."

The two girls looked at each other, each carefully veiling her smile, for both were filled with the same vague sense of social experience. Each read and was stung by a realization of the other's point of advantage. Dorothy had been born into a well-established pose, such as she could hardly afford to attain and Helen was impressed with her rival's grace and natural beauty.

"Won't you sit down?"

"But aren't we disturbing you?" Mrs. Purnell asked, with a glance to the writing materials.

"I don't mind that. I was writing some duty letters to kill time. I'm only too glad to stop because I'm reading in a writing mood and I can't afford to hear what is going on out side!"

"Dorothy, I'm afraid you are not quite as good as she is," Mrs. Purnell said, with a smile.

"I have an idea that they may find Gordon had an arrest and a re-arranged life. Still I agree with you that there is every cause for anxiety."

The good lady did not have a chance even to begin to argue with Dorothy or of a United States Senator, and the opportunity was not to be overlooked.

"The people say so really that Senator Moore has never been seen and that they are not likely to be found, or taken just for freeing him," Dorothy explained.

Helen took off her head with every expression of tremulous worry.

"But it isn't that alone," she insisted. "He's to be arrested for the Jensen shooting. That was why the press waited at his ranch after Sunday, but he's been away."

"For the Jensen shooting?" Dorothy showed her amazement very plainly. "Are you serious? She demanded, and Mrs. Purnell nodded and exclaimed: "What have they done?" I understand that you were with him yourself when he received word of it?"

"I was, and I was very shocked, but I suppose only to have planned the crime, I believe. He's supposed to have been the principal, isn't that what they call it?" She appealed to Mrs. Purnell.

"Oh, but do you think he could do such a thing?" Mrs. Purnell asked, much shocked.

"I don't know. I hope not," Dorothy burst out emphatically. "I know Gordon Wade so well to think for one minute that he did it; and every true friend of his ought to speak out at once and say the same thing."

The challenge in her voice was unmistakable and Mrs. Purnell moved uneasily in her chair. She glanced round the room and then turned to see that the latter had lost none of her poise.

"I hope so as much as you do," Helen said firmly. "But there's more to it here in these mountains than I find it hard to keep up with them."

"Of course," Mrs. Purnell soothed, with a troubled look at her daughter.

"Who swore out the warrant, I won-themselves but long enough for her to catch a word now and then, made her wonder if the town was really safe for her father, or for herself. A storm came on, and the strong wind whipped the blinds and caused the windows and kept them fluttering like flags. The distant muttering of the thunder, and an occasional sharp crack of lightning were on her tired nerves until she could sit still no longer.

For the first time in her life she went up to her room, intending to write some letters there, but her bed had not been made up, so she returned to the parlor with her fountain pen and writing paper. To Maxwell Frame she wrote: "Dear Father, I am unlikely to cheer him much. She had become so in the habit of taking her moods out on me that I had to do the same. She was second to no one to her. She despised him for his tolerance of her tyranny, never realizing that he deserved to himself the privilege of being a parent, and that he deserved all the rights and duties

Then to ease her mind of the strain in her, she wrote at some length to her mother, not telling the whole truth, but enough of it to give her overconfidence. She had nothing in the conversation, but went into the scene between her father and Gordon Wade. With a pen, she wrote dramatically of the Senator's threat to crush the ranchman. "That will please mother," she said to herself, as she read over her paper. "Gordon told you that he had not killed Jensen, and . . ."

The hotel-keeper poked his head in and said: "Two ladies to see you, Miss," he announced. "Mrs. Purnell and daughter."

"I have given Helen no chance to avert the visit, for with the obliqueness of the plains, he had brought the visitors upstairs with him, and so blotting what she had written and weighing what she had said, she accepted the breeze which arose to greet them.

WORLD HAPPENINGS BRIEFLY TOLD

Consumption of alcoholic liquors in Turkey was forbidden after April 3, says a Haxan despatch from Constantinople.

The Crystal Palace, London's famous fair ground and scene of many a military tournament and Football Association cup final, has been practically razed by fire.

Loosing her balance and falling on her head while learning to ride a bicycle, a twelve-year-old girl, Edith French, was fatally injured at Hamilton, Ont.

Canada's exports of fish and fish products totalled $1,668,256 in February, 1922, in comparison with $1,712,044 in the previous month, and $1,521,571 in February, 1922.

Tentative plans have been made in New York for the production of legitimate drama at small admission prices to combat the growing popularity of motion pictures.

That American liquor is being smuggled into Canada is indicated in the seizure by the customs offices at Brudenell, Ont., of twenty gallons of pure grain alcohol in cans. Five cases of gin also were gathered.

By a proclamation, June 1, will this year be observed in Canada as the birthday of His Majesty King George V. June 3 this year falls on a Sunday, and the proclamation provided for the following day being observed as a national holiday.

Religious News

Any person who wilfully furnishes a Minister, presbyter or elder with a false statement is guilty of an offence punishable by law. The law is a good one that ought to be widely copied. The average newspaper aims at reliability, but it is forced to place a certain amount of dependence on the honesty of those who furnish it with news.—Farmers' Sun.

KIDNEY TROUBLE?

The Kidneys are the Blood Filters—When They Weaken and Stop Up, The System Becomes Overloaded—Action Taken.

Toronto, Ont.—I can highly recommend Dr. Peter's Antiseptic and Aromatic Tablets to all those who suffer in any way with the kidney organs or bladder. After taking the tablets for a time, the kind I have ever taken. My kidneys were congested and inflamed, my back ached, and I suffered from a scalding and burning sensation in the almost dried up bladder. Thanks to Dr. Peter's Antiseptic Kidney Tablets I do not suffer from any of these symptoms as I did before. Dr. Peter's Antiseptic Tablets just the medicine they need.—Mrs. Albert Blunt, 61 York Street, Toronto.

NEW BLOOD NEEDED IN THE SPRINGTIME

Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a Blood-Improving, Health-Restoring Tonic.

Every man, woman and child needs new life and blood at the time of the year. That is a scientific fact. All doctors know it. The blood grows thin and poor in the winter; there is not enough of it, and, spring comes, the effort to make up and restore is often so weak and slow that we see how many people are pale and low at this time of the year. They complain of being tired, tired, tired, and often exhausted and half-sick. That is mother nature urging them to improve their blood supply; but often their desire for a weighty meal and rest cannot turn up the blood without help.

Here is where modern medical science comes to the rescue. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have a direct action on the blood vessels, and will give full use of the blood-making elements in your meals. Try them, and you will find your complexion improved, your eyesight strengthened, your cheeks and lips, you have more vim and energy and can work with less fatigue. The above statements are borne out by the experience of thousands of users. What, who says?—"Very recently I found myself in a badly run down condition. My stomach was quite out of order, and not only that, and we had not appeared to nourish blood; I did not seem to have enough blood; my hands and legs were blue, and I had no energy to work." These are the medicines but did not get good results. Then one day reading our newspaper I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to try them. I used a half a dozen, have a good appetite, and can do my work with ease. Naturally I have great faith in this medicine.

Whether you are seriously ill, or merely feel easily tired and out of sorts, you should try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Write to-day, and we will send medicine direct to you, or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box, by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brooklyn, N.Y.

Vancouver an Important Port Now Ranks Third in Importance on the Pacific Coast

A total of 716 ocean-going vessels, with a gross tonnage of 3,867,000, arrived and departed from the port of Vancouver in 1922, as compared with 176 vessels or 2,916,000 gross tons in 1921. During the year 15,146,000 cubic metres of cargo were handled, as against 9,880,000 tons in 1921. In addition, there was handled 22,500,000 feet of lumber, 166,000 bushels of grain, 182,000 barrels of flour, and 153,000 cases of apples, compared with 159,000,000, 1,240,000, 39,000 and 71,000 respectively in 1921. Vancouver is now third in rank on the Pacific Coast, having passed Seattle and Tacoma.

Mining Activity In B.C.

Systematic Prospecting Will be Carried on During the Coming Season.

Bronzed and fit, as is noted in the interest displayed in British Columbia mining properties owned by American capital, several deals involving large sums having been reported. In addition, arrangements for systematic prospecting during the coming season have been completed which will undoubtedly bring into view several additional properties for development.

Is It a Mistaken Policy

An Age-Old Argument that Invariably Makes for War

The argument that the stronger we are the less temptation will there be to attack us will be used a thousand times in the coming years as it has been in the past. And it is indicative of the one-sidedness of political thinking that it never seems to strike on that the position we take here is an anti-social one, that it asks of others something we passionately refuse to accept when asked of us. We do not tolerate the existence of a group of rival powers so strong that resistance to it would be hopeless; condemning us to a permanent diplomatic inferiority; making us a mere movement over the world a matter of suffering.—Norman Angell in "Is Britain to Live?"

Distinctive Names

Picturesque Appellations of Western Towns Add to Their Fame

"It is high time," says the Brampton Expositor, "that Moose Jaw changed its name." And it mentions Regina and Kenora as places which changed their names.

No doubt, says the Toronto Star, Regina was quite right in deciding that Pile of Bones was not a suitable name for a city that was destined to become the capital of a province, but when Rat Portage changed its name to Kenora, it evinced a finicky spirit and, for most of us, somehow, Kenora has never stuck out on the map as one of the salient points in Canada the way Rat Portage did.

As for Moose Jaw and Medicine Hat, we hope they will stick to the distinctive names they bear. Towns named like that appeal to the imagination, and one cannot travel through the west without stopping off to see them, and to see the citizens of towns who have enough personality to adhere to such names, instead of picking new and better ones out of the works of Bertie M. Clay or May Agnes Flanagan.

Ingenious Wind Turbine

Has Greater Efficiency than Windmill Says Japanese Inventor

An ingenious wind turbine, said to be capable of utilizing air currents in the generation of power with far greater efficiency than its predecessor, the windmill, has been perfected by A. Ozaki, a Japanese inventor. He claims the turbine in operation turns the power 50 per cent. of the time of the air currents striking the blades.

The ordinary windmill utilizes but 20 per cent. of the time. It includes a storage battery arrangement by which the power generated may be held in reserve to secure uninterrupted service when the wind subsides.

Minard's Liniment for Rheumatism

League Of Nations Plan Would Organize World On A Peaceful Basis

New York. Lord Robert Cecil in an interview with newsmen, denied that his trip to the United States was for the purpose of instructing the people of the United States what they should do about joining or not joining the League of Nations.

"I am not an imperious interlocutor in other people's affairs," he asserted. "I thought I had made it clear in my public statements that my object in coming here was to give information about the League of Nations as a first hand observer of a great international experiment. I would be guilty of the grossest impertinence if I attempted to instruct the United States people in their own affairs."

"I am presenting the League of Nations as a practical business proposition, and an organized international effort for peace. I can see no hope for the survival of European civilization unless there is an end of war and some hope of peace in the future."

Lord Robert said he had neither the expectation nor intention of changing the attitude of the United States people toward the League of Nations as expressed by the last election. He pointed out that there was as great a danger for a nation in distrust as there was in war.

While the decisions of the League would be decided by the votes of the members, he said, world public opinion would have the greatest force in influencing the members of the League to give just and impartial decisions.

The entrance of the United States into the League of Nations, while not necessary to the success of the League, he stated, would bring about an organization of the world on a peaceful basis. With the entrance of Russia and Germany, he said, it was expected that all of Europe, Asia and South America would be in the League, with only the United States on the outside.

My heart was so bad I had spells when driving the road and when I lay down and fell asleep I would carry me out from my wagon. I also took these pills in the night and during my daily work on my farm. My nerves were so bad I would jump out of bed and then compelled to walk the floor before I could settle down again, but after taking a few boxes of

Moslems Attack Jews

In Order to Escape Death Jews Forced to Accept Moslem Faith

Jerusalem. Scores of Jews are believed to have been killed in almost uninterrupted warfare launched on the Moslems at Yemem (Southwestern Arabia), according to reports received here.

The report says that many Jews, in order to escape death, have nominally accepted Mohammedanism, and that numerous Jewish children have been sold and given the alternative of proselytism, "because agriculture will never be on a satisfactory basis until the Jews can secure loans on long terms in the same manner as a business organization obtains money by selling bonds."

When asked why, according to reports, the Canadian Council of Agriculture intended asking the Dominion Government to defer the revision of the Bank Act, he asserted that the council did not think it possible for the committee examining the proposed changes to assimilate all the evidence and pass judgment properly before prorogation or conversion.

The report said that hundreds of Moslem refugees have been driven in all directions to escape their oppressors. Representatives of the Venetians in Palestine have appealed to Jewish organizations to provide aid with which the Venetian Jews may be able to escape to Palestine.

Favors Long Term Loans As A Means Of Helping Farmers Of The West

Montreal. Believing that conditions deteriorating affecting agriculture in Western Canada can be materially improved by conferences between commercial and agricultural interests, where a frank discussion of present problems would be undertaken on a business basis, the Canadian Council of Agriculture has decided to try and revise these meetings which were held in past years.

This was the statement made by C. Rice-Jones, Vice-President and General Manager of the United Grain Growers Company, Limited, with headquarters in Winnipeg, who visited this city recently.

It goes without saying that these meetings would be shown of political, agriculturally, financial, and business interests, except of present-day problems," Mr. Rice-Jones added. He added that considerable improvement would accrue if the two parties "met together."

Desiring that the farmers want something, not nothing," Mr. Rice-Jones favored the idea of long term loans—especially organized by private enterprise rather than the government, as a means of helping the farmers, "because agriculture will never be on a satisfactory basis until the farmers can secure loans on long terms in the same manner as a business organization obtains money by selling bonds."

When asked why, according to reports, the Canadian Council of Agriculture intended asking the Dominion Government to defer the revision of the Bank Act, he asserted that the council did not think it possible for the committee examining the proposed changes to assimilate all the evidence and pass judgment properly before prorogation or conversion.

Near East Relief Hindered By Turks

Authorities Say Organization Must Pay Consumption Tax

Constantinople. The Turkish authorities have refused to permit the Near East Relief to continue its efforts of relief to the 25,000 destitute and hungry refugees in Constantinople unless the organization paid the new consumption tax, which is four times as great as the import duty, it was announced by the Near East relief representatives.

The tax demanded by the Turks totals $12,000, and applies to the relief supplies consisting of rice, sugar, milk and corn grits given by the people of the United States. Protest was made to Adnan Bey and Hilmi Bey, representatives of the Ankara Government in Constantinople. The Turkish functionaries, however, declared they were powerless to interfere with the orders from Ankara.

JUTLAND

Everybody is wearing a smile. Why? Because of the much needed moisture we received the first of the week, of course.

We were very sorry to learn of the accident in which our pastor, Rev. Bender had last week while trying to help fight fire. We all hope he will be able to be around again and tell his pulpit here by next Sunday.

Mr. Will Miller of Didsbury took charge of Mr. Bender's field last Sunday, we are all enjoyed listening to him. Our Sunday School also was larger than ever, 17 was the total number of scholars and we believe there are still more children who will attend.

We are sorry to hurt the Burnside correspondents feeling re the lunch at the last social. I am sure I didn't go home hungry as we had lots of lunch left after the big crowd left and most of them were kind enough to take their cake there.

They talk about their cyclones in different parts of the States, haven't we had them right here lately only on a small scale. You can see real estate going straight up and every which way.

Who said it couldn't rain in Alberta? We had a lovely rain on Sunday and hope it keeps up as we need all the rain we can get.

The Jutland school was visited by a gentleman in charge of a burglar with mack and a full set of tools. He piled open the coal bin door, broke the lock, and helped himself to about two hundred pounds of coal. He sprinkled his trail from the coal bin to the road. Now it is high time for something to be done to put a stop to this as we have also had wheat and hay stolen. Surely the community won't stand for this. These low down petty thieves are too proud to beg but they are criminal enough to steal. The end of the rains will come and the sooner they are placed behind the bars the better it will be for the community at large.

We hear the hum of the baseball meetings lately as the season is about to begin. We hope to see and enjoy some good playing this summer on practice good, boys.

The debate that was held at Burnside on Friday was very interesting and enjoyable. Quite a few Jutland people attended and report that "Indifference came out ahead.

Even if the correspondent of the Jutland news is getting some hard looks and knocks in regards to the items under this heading we notice the first thing they look for is the antecedents news.

BURNSIDE

There was a good turn out at the U. P. A. meeting and debate in Burnsides School on Friday evening. The debate brought out both good speakers and good points. Mrs. Fred Bentzen and Mr. J. G. Dawson for the affirmative and Mr. Hanan Walsh and Mrs. Wm. Lyons for the negative all did splendidly.

The Judges, Miss Hall, Mrs. Eckel and Rayden Devitt decided in favor of the affirmative but congratulated both sides on the splendid array of points brought out.

The next U. P. A. meeting will be held in Jutland School on May 11th and it is expected some speakers will be present to discuss the "good roads" question.

Hello, Jutland! Still hungry?

The Junior Baseball team organized on Saturday evening with Jas. McLaughlin as Captain. Good luck boys in your efforts for good clean sport.

Miss Charlotte Miller is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Green and recuperating from her recent illness.

We are sorry to hear that Mrs. Theo Bell is suffering from a bad attack of rheumatism.
